1 I. Introduction and Interest of Amicus Curiae¹

2 Amicus American Immigration Council (Council) submits this brief in support of the 3 position of Plaintiffs U.S. Chamber of Commerce, et al., that Defendants violated the 4 Administrative Procedure Act when they issued interim final rules without undergoing notice
5 and comment rulemaking. The Council provides examples below where the immigration agency 6 contemplated significant regulatory changes affecting the H-1 visa category, issued a notice of 7 proposed rulemaking, and made beneficial changes in response to public comment before issuing 8 a final rule.

9 These examples stand in sharp contrast to the U.S. Department of Homeland Security’s 10 (DHS) interim final rule. Among other substantial changes, DHS is altering its regulatory 11 definition of “specialty occupation” – a term Congress defined in 8 U.S.C. § 1184(i)(1)(A)-(B) – 12 and the regulatory criteria by which an employer demonstrates that its job is in a “specialty 13 occupation.” Yet, DHS intends to impose these changes on December 7, without first 14 considering what those interested and affected have to say. The Administrative Procedure Act’s 15 notice and comment provisions are among the “procedural safeguards” that “help ensure that 16 government agencies are accountable and their decisions are reasoned.” Erringer v. Thompson, 17 371 F.3d 625, 629 (9th Cir. 2004) (quoting Sequoia Orange Co. v. Yeutter, 973 F.2d 752, 758 18 (9th Cir. 1992)). Through the notice and comment procedures, an agency’s regulations “are 19 tested via exposure to diverse public comment” and “ensure fairness to affected parties” as well 20 as to give those parties an opportunity to develop record evidence to support objections.
21 California v. Health and Human Servs., 281 F. Supp. 3d 806, 823 (N.D. Cal. 2017) (quoting 22 Envtl. Integrity Project v. Env’tl. Prot. Agency, 425 F.3d 992, 996 (D.C. Cir. 2005)).

5 II. Substantial Regulatory Changes Affecting the H-1 Visa Category Where the Agency
 6 Recognized the Benefit of Public Comments

7 Over the past 34 years, the legacy Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) and its 8 successor, U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS), have issued several rules for the 9 H-1 category utilizing the notice-and-comment rulemaking process, as required by the 10 Administrative Procedure Act. Three examples are provided of rules where the immigration 11 agency made substantial changes between the proposed and final rule, evincing the need for such 12 a process with the present IFR.

13 A. The Agency Issued a Proposed Rule Setting Standards for Demonstrating 14 H-1 Eligibility

15 In August 1986, the INS issued a proposed rule applicable to the H-1 category for foreign 16 nationals “of distinguished merit and ability,” See Temporary Alien Workers Seeking 17 Classification Under the Immigration and Nationality Act, 51 Fed. Reg. 28,576, 28,576-80
 18 (Aug. 8, 1986).² The agency identified a “main objective” of the proposed rule: “[T]o establish 19 realistic standards for determining who qualifies as a [foreign national] of distinguished merit
 20 and ability for H-1 classification.” Id. at 28,576. INS provided a 60-day period for public 21 comment. Id. at 28,577.

22 By utilizing the notice and comment procedure, the agency realized that it should not 23 proceed to a final rule. Instead, INS issued a second proposed rule. See Temporary Alien

25 ² The proposed rule also included the H-2 (temporary services or labor) and H-3 (trainee) 26 categories then in effect. Congress established these three H categories in 1952. Id. at 28,577. In 27 1986, INS was part of the Department of Justice. In 2003, Congress transferred immigration 28 authority to the Department of Homeland Security and USCIS became the benefits component when Congress divided “legacy” INS into three areas of responsibility. See 6 U.S.C. §§ 111-12, 113(a)(1)(E), 557 (USCIS initially was identified as the Bureau of Citizenship and Immigration Services).

1 Workers Seeking Classification Under the Immigration and Nationality Act, 53 Fed. Reg. 43,217
2 (Oct. 26, 1988). The agency explained:

3 Due to the controversial nature of the previous rule and the extensive 4 modifications which the Service proposes to make to the proposal after 5 considering the comments and consulting with affected groups, the 6 Service is issuing this new Notice of Proposed Rulemaking to give the 7 public an opportunity to comment on the changes.

8 53 Fed. Reg. at 43,218.

9 In response to requests from “several” congressional committees, INS, through an outside
10 consulting firm, conducted a study about the occupations, wages and working conditions of H-1 11 workers, their impact on U.S. workers, and the impact the proposed rule would have on the 12 admission of H-1 workers, and in turn on the industries that employed them. Id. Congress
13 delayed publication of a final rule from the original (August 1986) proposed rule to allow time
14 for it to review the study and decide whether to amend the Immigration and Nationality Act. Id.
15 The agency also expressed concern about lawsuits filed against it about the standards for H-1 16 classification. Id. In response, INS proposed “this significantly modified H rule which addresses 17 the major areas of concern of the public, employers, labor organizations, and Congress.” Id. The 18 agency provided 30 days for public comment. Id.

19 In January 1990, INS issued the final rule, effective 31 days after publication. See 20 Temporary Alien Workers Seeking Classification Under the Immigration and Nationality Act, 21 55 Fed. Reg. 2606, 2606 (Jan. 26, 1990). The agency noted the positive reaction from 22 commenters that the second proposal was a “significant improvement” over the original 23 proposed rule and incorporated many of the changes recommended in response to the first 24 proposal. Id. at 2606-07. As one example where INS responded to public input, as well as 25 consideration of court decisions and further agency research, the agency eliminated an 26 experience equivalency that required two years of college-level training and instead expanded 27 how equivalency could be established through different methodologies, such as credit for 28 training and/or work experience, or meeting certain testing or professional association requirements. See id. at 2611.

1 B. The Agency Issued A Proposed Rule To Address Statutory Changes To The 2 H-1 Category

3 Congress established the present-day H-1B classification for temporary workers in a 4 “specialty occupation” as part of the Immigration Act of 1990 (IMMACT90). § 205(c), Pub. L.
5 No. 101-649, 104 Stat. 4978, 5020 (Nov. 29, 1990). In July 1991, INS issued a proposed rule for, 6 inter alia, the purpose of “conform[ing] Service policy” to congressional intent relating to 7 changes in the H category. See Temporary Alien Workers Seeking Classification Under the 8 Immigration and Nationality Act, 56 Fed. Reg. 31,553, 31,553 (July 11, 1991). The agency said 9 that Congress “significantly changed the definition of the H-1B category.” Id. Comments were 10 due 32 days later. Id.

11 INS issued its final rule in December 1991, five months after it published the proposed 12 rule. See Temporary Alien Workers Seeking Classification Under the Immigration and 13 Nationality Act, 56 Fed. Reg. 61,111 (Dec. 2, 1991). Based on comments, the agency amended 14 the degree equivalency requirements to accept foreign degrees determined equivalent to 15 doctorate degrees granted by U.S. academic institutions through documentation described in the 16 final regulation. See id. at 61,112, 61,122 (then to be codified at 8 C.F.R.
17 § 214.2(h)(4)(iii)(D)(5)). Another example of the benefit of public comment was INS’ 18 modification of the requirement that employers pay for return transportation expenses when an 19 H-1B worker is “dismissed” to clarify that the employer must have acted to terminate the 20 worker’s employment. Id. at 61,113.

21 C. The Agency Issued a Proposed Rule to Implement Registration Instead of 22 Requiring Fully-Documented H-1B Petition Submissions

23 In December 2018, DHS issued a proposed rule creating a registration tool for H-1B
24 petitioners. See Registration Requirement for Petitioners Seeking to File H-1B Petitions on 25 Behalf of Cap-Subject Aliens, 83 Fed. Reg. 62,406 (Dec. 3, 2018). The registration tool was a 26 significant change from past practice. Before DHS adopted the registration tool, companies had 27 to submit fully-documented petitions to the agency even though USCIS could only accept a 28

1 fraction due to the 65,000 annual “cap” on H-1B visa numbers.³ See id. at 62,408-09 (discussing 2 that USCIS “would no longer need to physically receive and handle hundreds of thousands of H-3 1B petitions (and the accompanying supporting documentation) before conducting the random 4 selection process”). The system of filing fully-documented petitions burdened and frustrated the 5 agency, the employer-petitioners, and the foreign national-beneficiaries. See id. at 62407.

6 Instead, the agency proposed that companies submit an electronic registration, with limited 7 information required about the company and the foreign national. If more registrations were 8 submitted than visa numbers available, the agency would conduct a random selection of the 9 registration forms. Only companies notified by USCIS would be eligible to file a fully-10 documented H-1B petition. DHS did not make such a momentous change by interim final rule.
11 Instead, the agency gave advance notice and accepted comments for 30 days. Id. at 62,406.

12 On January 31, 2019, DHS issued the final rule, with an effective date of April 1. See 13 Registration Requirement for Petitioners Seeking to File H-1B Petitions on Behalf of Cap-
14 Subject Aliens, 84 Fed. Reg. 888, 888 (Jan. 31, 2019). Two examples of important changes DHS 15 made in response to public comment are: 1) providing at least thirty days’ advance notice of the 16 starting date for the initial registration period, published in the Federal Register instead of the 17 original proposal to give notice only on USCIS’ website with no timeline; and 2) providing at 18 least 90 days for filing a fully-documented H-1B petition after commenters explained that the 19 proposed 60 days was too short to gather supporting documentation. Id. at 889.

24 ³ The 65,000 H-1B visa number limitation is per fiscal year. 8 U.S.C. § 1184(g)(1)(A)(vii).
25 Congress requires the agency to set aside up to 6,500 per free trade agreements with Chile and 26 Singapore (for the H-1B1 visa category). See 8 U.S.C. § 1184(g)(8). Congress also provides an 27 additional 20,000 visa numbers annually for foreign nationals with U.S. master’s or higher 28 degrees. See 8 U.S.C. § 1184(g)(5)(C). USCIS included selection for these visa numbers in the proposed registration system to replace fully-documented H-1B petition submission. See 83 Fed.
Reg. at 62,406. Certain categories of employers, such as institutions of higher education are exempt from the “cap” and are able to file H-1B petitions as needed. See 8 U.S.C.
§ 1184(g)(5)(A)-(B).

1 III. Conclusion

2 These examples demonstrate the value of APA notice and comment procedures in 3 making agencies aware of the real-world impact of their proposals. Comments about flaws in the 4 premises on which a proposed rule rests; impracticalities or inefficiencies or lack of clarity in 5 regulatory language; the need to provide alternative procedures are just some of the benefits to 6 an agency from receiving and considering comments before issuing a final rule. The American 7 Immigration Council urges the Court to grant the Plaintiffs' motion for preliminary injunction to 8 stay the interim final rules.
